This list refers to people with a known connection to the Parishes of Chardstock, All Saints or Wambrook.

In September, 1752 Britain changed from the Julian to the Gregorian calendar and at the same time the official start of the year was changed from 25th March to 1st January. This transcription records marriages between 1st January and 24th March in those years prior to 1752 as, for example, 12.3.1661/2. The first year (1661) is the date under the Julian or Old Style calendar and the second (1662) that under the Gregorian or New Style calendar.

1824 At Yarcombe, Hugh CRABB, born Chardstock, and Elizabeth POPE of Yarcombe.

Western Circuit, Dorchester March 10th 1826. Court case Chard v Bently - Mr Serjeant Wylde, with whom was Mr C F Williams, said this action was brought to recover damages for a breach of promise of marriage. The nature of the complaint was sufficient to excite the curiosity and attention of the Jury; and if, on the investigation of the case, the action should appear to be well founded, the honest minds of those he was addressing would soon arrive at a just decision with regard to the extent of the injury this plaintiff had received and would award her an adequate condensation for her wrongs.

To-day they had to consider the case of a female, the best part of whose life had been consumed by the defendant in a long courtship; and who ultimately deserted her to marry another, without alleging the slightest fault to that lady, or assigning any reasonable cause for his capricious behaviour. Miss Chard, the plaintiff in this suit, was the daughter of a respectable farmer, living at Chardstock, in this county, and one of a family of eight children; she was now in her 27th year. Mr Bently, the defendant, was the son of an opulent farmer, residing a short distance from the plaintiff's father and at the time this courtship commenced, superintended his father's business, but more recently had established himself in a farm of considerable magnitude, that was believed to be his own property. He was some years older than the plaintiff, being in his 35th year. From the contiguity of the two farms, an intimacy arose between the families so many as 13 or 14 years since; and as the attentions of the defendant were then particularly addressed to the plaintiff, her parents thought it prudent to inquire if his intentions were honourable towards Miss Mary Ann [Chard] and whether his visits to her were sanctioned with the approbation of his father and friends. Mr Bently assured the mother of the plaintiff that he came to her house as the suitor of her daughter and that his father had no objection whatever to their marriage; and for many years afterwards he was in the constant habit of seeing Miss Chard twice or thrice a week; and the only reason he gave for delaying the marriage so long was that his property was not sufficient to support an establishment equal to the respectability of their families, but which, he said, he should be able to do on coming into the possession of property which he expected from his friends; and he more than once observed, that he neither expected nor required any fortune with Miss Chard on their marriage.

The defendant left his father's house about two or three years since, to take possession of the Haulditch farm and estate, still in the neighbourhood of Mr Chard's, on his own account, and continued the same attentions to Miss Chard for some time afterwards, as he had done before, but deferring the marriage on account of the delapidated state of the farm house, which he was anxious to repair before taking home a wife. At length the 1st of April was appointed for the wedding day and every preparation was made by Mrs Chard, the mother, to celebrate an event which was considered alike advantageous and joyful to both families; the happiness of this day, however, the defendant never permitted Miss Chard to enjoy, for, on the Thursday before the day on which the marriage was to be solemnized, Mr Bently sent for this young lady's brother and informed him that he could not make Miss Chard his wife, for that his father and he had had some angry words about it and that he (the father) would not suffer the marriage to take place. On the day after the disappointment, Mr Bently came crying to the house and declared the fault was not his; "It had always been his determination to marry Mary Ann and if ever he married a woman, she should still be his wife". From this time he ceased to visit the plaintiff. To another friend, who had also interested himself on this young lady's behalf, the defendant had likewise said that "if he ever married any other woman but Mary Ann, he would consent to have his head taken off". [This expression was accompanied with a [illegible] and deliberate [illegible] of the hand round the throat, by the witness when related the conversation, which raised a laugh in the Court that for several minutes interrupted the detail he was giving].

Many months had not elapsed from the period of this cruel disappointment before the defendant married a widow lady, named Jeffries, who lived at Thorncomb, close by his father's house, and it was suspected that, for some time previous to the marriage day being appointed with Miss Chard, the defendant had been paying his address to Mrs Jeffries, possibly with the view to augmenting his fortune, even at the expense of the happiness of that lady, who, in every honourable thought that could associate itself with the female mind, had looked upon the defendant as her husband for many years past. These were the circumstances of the case and the Jury, in estimating the injury Miss Chard had sustained, would take into their consideration the irreparable loss which twelve or fourteen years were to a young lady, with all its possible consequences, and return a verdict accordingly.

The plaintiff's mother and brother, with two other friends, were examined and fully supported the statement made by the Learned Serjeant.

Mr Erskine, in addressing the Jury, on the defendant's behalf, admitted that the plaintiff was entitled to a verdict, but he apprehended this would not be considered a case where heavy damages ought to be given; for, in truth, with the exception of not having married the lady, there was not the slightest imputation against the defendant that he had done any act that was at all calculated to wound the feelings of Miss Chard, or affected future interests. It had been charged to the defendant that at the time he had appointed to marry the plaintiff, he was then courting another lady, whom he afterwards made his wife; but the evidence was directly against this allegation, as it had been distinctly stated that Mr Bently had not been observed paying attention to Mrs Jeffries more than seven or eight months prior to his marriage with her, which took place in October, 1825, considerably more than twelve months after he had ceased to be intimate with the plaintiff. The fair presumption therefore was that the defendant, as he has stated had declined fulfilling his engagements with Miss Chard, knowing the disinclination his father had to the match and being conscious that by marrying against his consent, he would be entailing ruin on himself and unhappiness on the lady who should become his wife.

Mr Justice Burrough said a verdict must be given for the plaintiff as it was admitted a promise had been made and broken. His Lordship scarcely knew of any greater injury that could be done to a young lady than to desert her after a long courtship and the Jury, by their verdict, should protect them from having their feelings and interests thus trifled with. The only apology the defendant had offered for his conduct was that his father was averse to the marriage; but that was not to be assumed as a fact, which was not supported by evidence and here the Jury had heard nothing to the contrary but that the match was equally agreeable to the parents of both parties.

A verdict was returned for the the plaintiff - Damages Two Hundred Pounds.

- 1855 A Bigamist's Career - A middle-aged man named Thomas LARCOMBE of Chardstock, Dorset was indicted at the last Wells Assizes for bigamy and a true bill found against him.

Mr Bere, for the prosecution had previously obtained a writ of habeas to bring him from Dorchester gaol to Wells for trial, the return to which the prisoner was too ill to be tried and the prosecutor (Mr Honebon, the guardian of the parish) and witnesses were consequently bound over by Mr Gurney to appear at the Taunton Assizes last week. Meanwhile the prisoner had been removed from Millbank Penitentiary and another habeas was moved for by Mr Bere, before Mr Justice Erle, to bring him down for trial; but finding that the prisoner was undergoing a sentence of four years' penal servitude, his lordship thought the prosecution had better be dropped and therefore refused the writ, but allowed the expences.

Larcombe professed to buy and sell young apple trees, calling himself a nuseryman. That he sold largely there was no doubt, but that he bought extensively was less certain, inasmuch as many growers of trees frequently missed their property and suspected their whereabouts, and twice was the prisoner summarily convicted of the offence, once paying the penalty in cash, and once in hard labour at Dorchester gaol. He was hardly at liberty ere he committed a third offence of the same nature and finding a warrant was issued against him, he absconded, whereby his wife and six children were cast upon the parish.

The prosecutor, Mr Honebon, who is constable as well as guardian, having ascertained that the prisoner was at Curry Rivell, near Langport, went there and apprehended him, when, to his surprise, he found the prisoner was passing under the name of "William Chubb" and had actually married a young orphan girl, named Lucy Ann MOUNTER, to whom he represented himself as a widower, and having buried a wife and two children.

For the desertion of his family he was committed for three months' hard labour; for the larceny, after former convictions, to four years penal servitude; and for the bigamy his trial as above mentioned.

The illness of the prisoner was, no doubt, feigned, as, at the last January sessions at Dorchester he was reported as having been detected in then attempting to impose upon the surgeon by a feigned illness, which led to his removal to Millbank.

- 1857/1860 At St. Andrew's, Chardstock on 10.1.1857 the Banns were read for a marriage between William LARCOMBE, bachelor, of Chardstock and Louisa DIMENT, spinster, of Chardstock. The second and third readings of the Banns did not take place nor did the marriage; Louisa Diment being recorded as underage. The second and third reading of the Banns were then to be heard on 8.5.1857 and 15.5.1857, but these were withdrawn at the request of the mother.

The following newspaper article explains the situation:

Chard Petty Sessions - Louisa DIMENT, of Chardstock, applied for an order of affiliation on William LARCOMBE, of the same place, as the father of her illegitimate [sic] child. Mr. Day for complainant. The defendant had kept company with complainant for four years, promised her marriage, and had the banns of marriage published in the parish church - the vicar, however, discovered that complainant was under age, and before publishing the banns a second time, informed the parties, it was necessary to obtain her mother's consent - Larcombe made this a pretext for not performing his contract - which had such effect on the complainant, as to produce premature labour - during her illness, Larcombe frequently visited her, and promised to marry her as soon as she got better - had given her money during her illness and since her confinement. These facts having been proved, the defendant put several questions to complainant, imputing connection with another man, which she indignantly denied, and asked him why he had not brought his witnesses, as she had before challenged him to produce them at Chardstock, "face to face". Order made for 2s per week and costs.

A complete set of Banns were read on 13.5.1860, 20.5.1860 and 27.5.1860 and the marriage finally took place on 2.8.1860.
